HANGING IN THE BALANCE

THE removal of Stalin's embalmed body from the revered Lenin-Stalin mausoleum provides the most vivid illustration of the lengths to which the leaders of Russia are prepared to go to repudiate the widely-criticised "cult of personality." No single act could have marked so decisively this rejection of a man and his policies whose praises were once sung from Russian rooftops.

It also marks the culmination of the current attacks against the "anti-party group"—the men who were Stalin's political heirs and who ruled Russia between the time of Stalin's death and the accession of Mr. Kruschev. Their fate now hangs in the balance.

THE removal of Stalin's body has also a symbolic significance for Albania, whose dictator General Enver Hoxha, currently at loggerheads with Moscow, has fashioned himself in the image of the former Soviet leader. Inextricably involved also are the Chinese. Albania's ally in the dispute with Russia. The interesting question is why has Mr. Kruschev chosen this time for an ideological showdown?

It is not certain whether he has acted out of a feeling of self-confidence or insecurity. The process of disgrace and humiliation which the anti-party group has been undergoing in recent years may have reached the stage where only the coup de grace remained to be administered. Alternatively, Mr. Kruschev may have felt that previous disciplinary measures against the group did not go far enough and that with China's support, their continued existence poses a new threat both to his person and his policies.

IN either case, relations between Peking and Moscow have reached a new crisis-point. Mr. Kruschev seems to feel that the rivalry between the pro-Stalinists and the anti-Stalinists must be resolved soon and permanently if he is to remain the dominant personality in the Communist world and if his own views are to prevail over those of Mao Tse-tung's.

He also realises there are pressures building up against him which could become the instrument of his downfall. His agricultural policies have been a frequent source of criticism. Moreover, the diehard militants who remain in Russia and who rule China and Albania are unrepentantly opposed to his so-called "soft" line in East-West relations.

Perhaps Mr. Kruschev's recent stoking of the Berlin fires together with his multi-megaton bomb tests in the Arctic have mollified his critics somewhat, but the Soviet Premier has thrown down the gauntlet defiantly in his complete and now final repudiation of Stalin.

WITH the near-unanimous backing of the Congress he is in a strong position to continue his fight. He has issued a veiled warning to China that any nation attempting to go it alone "would deprive itself of the opportunities afforded by the world socialist system. In view of China's continuing food problems and her dependence on Soviet aid, the threat could hardly have been put more bluntly. Whether Mao Tse-tung will put principles and ideology before the well-being of 660 million people remains to be seen.

Hattie destroys capital of British Honduras 60 DIE IN HURRICANE HORROR

Bodies lying in the streets of Belize

Belize, Nov. 1.
Government authorities reported that at least 60, possibly more, persons perished in the blasts of wind and water from Hurricane Hattie. Some of the dead are still lying in the streets of Belize.

The casualties include 25 in Belize, the capital of this central American British colony, and 23 in Stann Creek, to the south of the city. Reports of deaths at Caye Caulker range up to 40.

The "eye" of Hurricane Hattie, attended by wind gusts up to 200 miles per hour and 10-foot high tidal waves that rolled into Belize, passed through Stann Creek about 7:30 on Tuesday morning.

Homeless

There are only three or four houses left standing in Stann Creek. In Belize, 70 to 80 per cent of the buildings are damaged.

Authorities here estimated there are 10,000 to 15,000 persons left homeless by the hurricane's destruction.

While British forces rushed emergency supplies to Belize, the violent storm crossed Guatemala and threatened Mexico's west coast.

Earlier, Governor Collier Thornley, in a radio broadcast, appealed for troops and rescue boats.

Shortly after 1 pm the Governor radioed to the British Commander-in-Chief at Jamaica: "Request as many troops as are available be sent immediately. Company strength. These troops must be self-supporting. Have you any amphibian craft for inland water navigation?"

Flew over

From Chetumal, Mexico, a newspaper correspondent reported that the hurricane left Belize, "in the middle of a lake created by the sea."

After a flight over the city he filed this report to the Mexico City newspaper Diario de la Tarde:

"I have just made a flight over Belize in a Mexican Air Force plane. Thirty-five minutes after leaving Chetumal, we flew over the Belize airport but we were not able to land."

"Belize is now in the middle of a lake created by the sea. Outside the city, all the trees are torn up by the roots and scattered about in the mud."

"Many houses have lost their roofs. A good number of homes, mostly built of wood, are completely destroyed. In many cases, houses torn by the hurricane can be seen tumbled one on top of another. Although Belize has some stone buildings, most are wooden."

Radio out

"The hurricane brought the sea into Belize's streets, toppled roofs, and leveled the radio tower, cutting off all outside communication."

"The rain continued to beat down on all the isthmus," the correspondent reported.

Meanwhile, three American Naval vessels have landed doctors, medical supplies, and other emergency relief in the British Honduras. Atlantic Fleet Headquarters announced tonight.

They said the vessels—a destroyer and a fleet tender—had anchored at English Cay Light, 12 miles down channel from Belize, the capital. They put doctors and supplies ashore in small boats.

Naval headquarters said the ships had not tried to navigate up channel to Belize because Hurricane Hattie had blown away buoys and other navigational aids.

A U.S. aircraft carrier was also leaving for Belize this afternoon from Florida, carrying helicopters and emergency stores.

First relief supplies to reach Belize were flown in today by a Tae Airlines plane, placed at the disposal of the Governor. UPI & Reuter.

MP wants troops in Hongkong reduced

London, Nov. 1.
A Labour MP today urged the British Government to reduce the number of British troops in Hongkong.

Britain should use seaborne and airborne troops for this and other Far East areas, he said.

The Minister for Defence, Mr. Harold Watkinson, made no comment on this suggestion.

The MP was Mr. George Brown, Labour's deputy leader, who suggested in the debate on the Queen's speech that Britain should review her overseas defence commitments.

Some must be cut and the method of covering others altered, he told the House of Commons in a debate on the government's new legislative programme.

He said that British forces were not properly deployed or effectively armed or equipped and that in the present political circumstances, the European theatre must take first place.

Enormous

The Far Eastern commitment, he said, could be more easily covered by seaborne and airborne troops than landborne.

The Navy and Marines found it easier to recruit than the Army.

Britain had 20,000 soldiers or so at Singapore and Hongkong—a lot of them would be of enormous help elsewhere.

PLANE CRASH KILLS TWO

London, Nov. 2.
Two crew members of a car-ferry aircraft were killed and eight persons injured today when the plane crashed in the fog on the Island of Guernsey in the English Channel.

The plane broke in two when it hit the ground. First persons on the scene found the seven passengers still strapped in their seats. All the passengers and the hostess were sent to hospital.

The crash occurred as the plane was landing on Guernsey and overshot the field. The plane was a Silver City Airways Bristol Freighter.—UPI.

Stalin now lies about 25 yards away in a grass plot under the Kremlin Wall, his grave marked simply by a black marble slab bearing only the inscription "J. V. Stalin—1878-1953."

BUILDINGS BLOWN UP

New York, Nov. 1.
An underground explosion and fire rocked the huge Canfield Soya soybean processing plant in Decatur, Indiana, today, injuring 10 workers.

Three buildings were blown up, but none of the 17 persons in the immediate area was injured seriously.—UPI.

More than 8,000 Muscovites went out in Moscow to take down the thousands of portraits of Stalin hanging undisturbed in public buildings.

Yesterday a 10-foot high picture of Stalin in his marshal's uniform hung in the main hall of the central telegraph building, near one of Lenin.

Today Stalin had disappeared and a portrait of Mr. Kruschev, wearing his medals, had been moved nearer Lenin.—Reuter.

It seems as though the order has gone out in Moscow to take down the thousands of portraits of Stalin hanging undisturbed in public buildings.

They fled in two by two and found that Lenin had not been moved. He was still lying nearest the entrance.

BLANK SPACE

Beside him however there was only a blank space where Stalin had been lying since his death in 1953.

Stalin now lies about 25 yards away in a grass plot under the Kremlin Wall, his grave marked simply by a black marble slab bearing only the inscription "J. V. Stalin—1878-1953."

Stalin's name disappeared from over the entrance to the Mausoleum during the night and now workmen have fixed what looks like a temporary sign with the single name "Lenin" in dark red letters.

Newcomers for Presidium and Secretariat K STRENGTHENS HIS HOLD

Anti-Stalinists put in vital party posts

A top Western assessment indicated today that Soviet Premier Kruschev has considerably strengthened his hold on the Kremlin leadership, with noted anti-Stalinists promoted to key party posts.

At least six prominent anti-Stalinists have been put in vital jobs, in the powerful Presidium and the Party Secretariat.

Moreover, a new star has moved into position close to the top, rivalling Mr. Kozlov, the heir apparent to Mr. Kruschev.

He is 50-year-old Mr. Gennadi Voronov, the agricultural "hero" who produced bumper harvests in the Orenburg region and drew public applause from Mr. Kruschev.

Mr. Voronov, who became a candidate member of the Presidium only last January, now appears to rank no. 3 in the hierarchy, after Mr. Kruschev and Mr. Kozlov.

There is speculation that he may even overtake Mr. Kozlov in the order of succession. But this far it has been made clear that Mr. Kozlov still ranks immediately after Mr. Kruschev in the secretariat by listing him immediately after his chief.

Carefully picked

The Central Committee of the Party has had about half its membership renewed. The newcomers appear to have been carefully picked. Many are known personal supporters or protégés of Mr. Kruschev, and in many cases his personal choice.

Ranking military chiefs and propagandists have been elected to the central committee. They, too, are known backers of Mr. Kruschev.

Doubtful members as well as "failures" have been removed from the policy-making bodies of the party.

A noted ouster from the Presidium and the Party Secretariat, in 44-year-old Mr. Dubek Nurdin Mukhiddinov, the only Moslem and representative from Central Asia to have reached the heights of the Presidium.

Closer control

Mr. Mukhiddinov was responsible for Soviet manoeuvring in the Middle East in the crucial stages of Russian infiltration of the strategic area. Later he handled African policies including the Congo episode which ended with the ouster of the Soviets from Leopoldville. African developments have not gone to the liking of Mr. Kruschev, either in Africa or in the United Nations.

The assessment has been unable to provide an explanation.

Mr. A. N. Shelepin

tion for the removal from the Central Committee is Mr. Ivan Serov, former chief of the anti-party campaign.

The Presidium has been reduced in number from 14 to 11. This is held a calculated move of the part of Mr. Kruschev.

32 KILLED

Naval captain was hero of air disaster

Rio de Janeiro, Nov. 1.

A Portuguese naval captain was the hero of an air disaster at Recife, northern Brazil, today when a giant DC7 four-engined plane hit a hillside and burst into flames, killing 32 of the 69 people aboard.

Captain Henrique Alfonso da Silva Horta, flying to take up a new command, pulled several passengers from the burning plane. Then, he himself, collapsed with a deep head wound, and was rushed to hospital.

REPORT of Soccer match,

When the first goal was scored the reserve force of mounted police moved on to the field to meet the sudden rush of 14,000 spectators.

The referee, armed with tear-gas grenades, was knocked down by a horse. Defensive bodyguards, attached to each player, in order to interpose themselves between opponents who might come to blows, helped to carry off the eight injured players.

Meanwhile, disappointed fans who had been unable to gain admittance to the ground set fire to the stands, smashed the entrances, and started a bottle-fight among themselves.

In passing

A SMUG comment on the bad manners of the French,

"who mop up their sauce or gravy with bread," made me laugh. Until this accurately self-concious age came everybody behaved in this sensible manner.

I have a book called "Educational" for ladies, published in 1951, in the section devoted to food. It says: "If what you are eating has any liquid, sop

the bread and then raise it to your mouth."

PARSON WILL QUIT
TO SAVE LIVES

The pilot and passenger of a Cessna aircraft which had been missing for several days, were found on the south east section of Lake Eyre.

Mr G. P. Truscott, the pilot, had crash-landed the plane on the salt bed of the Lake to avoid a blinding dust storm which had developed after leaving Darwin. He had expected the salt bed to be hard because it is used for racing. Instead it was a bog, and as the aircraft landed it cart-wheeled.

The two men had with them about half a gallon of water, some coffee in thermos flasks, a loaf of bread and some Bungarlan Salami. After two days their water was finished and everything eaten, they then mixed salt water with their tooth paste, and with that, existed on their leather belts and flies in an effort to keep themselves alive. The two men marked a 50-foot cross on the lake bed to attract searchers with the message "Do Not Land" & FX.

In air distress code F means that an aircraft's occupants need food and water and X means that the aircraft is immobilised.

Later they were despatched by a medical examination at Leigh Creek Hospital.

All this is the result of answering 230 questions correctly and beating 40 opponents.

His unusually retentive memory stores knowledge gleaned from reading encyclopedias, and also from reading lists of questions and answers asked in overseas quiz shows.

In 1962 Sydney telephone subscribers will have the choice, if they wish, of changing their standard black telephone for a gay colour.

The new telephones will be available in ivory, mist grey, fern green, topaz yellow, and lavender red, but with them will be an additional charge of £2 for new subscribers and £4 for those present subscribers who want their black sets changed.

The class will cover the entire metropolitan area, north to Cessnock and south to Nowra.

The course which is for persons 16 years, who are complete beginners will consist of five lessons, and no class will be held in a pool open to public view.

Children have not been included in the campaign because it is felt that in all districts they are adequately cared for.

Each year more than 450 people lose their lives in water accidents, and deaths from drowning in Australia are second in number only to deaths on the road, and next to deaths of drowning fatalities in New South Wales are adults. Various councils have made the pools available and it is expected that during the "Herald" campaign thousands of adults will be taught enough to reduce the overall risk greatly.

The words were just enough to scratch her back to a sense of reality," said Mr Bourne.

He had written them down as a thought for a sermon. Now he repeated them over the phone.

"The words were just enough to scratch her back to a sense of reality," said Mr Bourne.

He lost the impulse to commit suicide.

Two days later the woman came to see me and revealed who she was.

HIGH AMOUNT OF IODINE 131
FOUND IN UK MILK

London, Nov. 1. The amount of radioactive iodine 131 in British milk last week was higher than the quantity regarded as the maximum safe level if continued for a year, the Agricultural Research Council stated here today.

LONGER HOURS, ETC

Britain changes
drinking law

London, Nov. 1. Britain's drinkers raised their glasses today to longer drinking hours and more places to drink in.

A new drinking law that came into force at 8.30 a.m. yesterday now lets off like a drink supplier in Britain these new privileges.

They can buy bottled goods at a liquor store before 9 p.m.

or during the midafternoon hours when they are closed, liquor stores in the past had to admit pub hours usually from around 10.30 a.m. to 3 p.m. and 5 p.m. to 10.30 p.m.

Restaurants and hotels that don't have liquor licences can now serve drinks with meals if they supply at least one main meal a day.

'Drinking up' time

Guests in licensed hotels or boarding houses now can take friends back for a drink after pub closing time. But there's a small catch—the guests must pay for the drinks.

Patrons in pubs and inns are allowed a 10-minute "drinking up" time after the bar has closed.

In London's West End, clubs and restaurants with special licences to serve drinks until 2 a.m. can now keep it flowing until 3 a.m.—Sunday mornings, too.

All over the country drinks at Saturday night dances can be served until the early hours of Sunday—except at Easter.

And liqueur-laced chocolates can be sold in any corner candy store.

The new law also is calculated to infuse more gaiety into pub life.

The pubs can now play records or even divert the customers with as many as two entertainers without having to buy a special music and dancing licence.

And billiards will join darts as a permissible Sunday diversion while the bartender is filling them up again.—AP.

Wants body to look into complaints

London, Nov. 1. The first private Member's motion notified for Parliament's new session calls for a kind of public defender on Scandinavian ombudsman lines to watch complaints of private citizens when they come into conflict with the authorities.

Presented by Dr. Donald Johnson, Conservative MP, and supported by six other of his party's members, the motion urged the Government to appoint immediately a parliamentary commissioner on the lines of the Scandinavian ombudsman with powers to investigate and report publicly upon complaints by individuals against administrative and executive authority.—China Mail Special.

Opera singer loses voice
in performance

New York, Nov. 1. Soprano Leontyne Price, who lost her voice in the midst of a performance at the Metropolitan Opera night, was reported resting comfortably today.

Her difficulty was attributed to an acute virus infection.

A spokesman for Miss Price said a doctor would examine her later today to ascertain whether she will be able to sing in "Madame Butterfly" at the Opera on Friday night.

Her voice failure occurred during a performance of Puccini's "La Fanciulla Del West." —AP.

She said: "In the old days one could tell a girl what was right and wrong, but now that is impossible."

"There is only one subject they can talk about and that is sex."

Residents in the demand homes regard newcomers as "squares" if they have not had some sexual experience.

They were not afraid of venereal disease or pregnancy, Miss Drury said. Numerous newcomers to the homes of 13 or 14 arrived pregnant.

She singled out for criticism lorry drivers who interfered with girls they gave lifts to, and coloured immigrants who harboured young girls and took money from them.—China Mail Special.

THE LONELY IKE CALLS A CABINET MEETING

from HELEN MASON

EVERY morning at six o'clock an active man—recently was his 71st birthday—wakes up on a farm in Gettysburg. He has enough energy to run the United States. But for the first time in 20 years, Dwight David Eisenhower has only his own life to run.

A 44-year-old man has taken over his job of managing a farm. Nine capable men smoothly operate his 180-acre farm. He has nothing more urgent to work on than his personal mail.

Retirement is the most difficult task ever taken on by the 33rd President of America. And he is trying to do it with it by pretending that it doesn't exist. Inevitably, however, he was soon forced to keep him from sleeping, he gets up at his usual hour, and eats a hearty breakfast. Then he drives to his office, where he answers 2,300 letters a week and keeps busy a staff of six.

Old friends

The man agreed to weighing invitations to a Summit conference he now boycotted by society matrons wanting him to speak at meetings. Rather wistfully, he still writes to national leaders like Mr Macmillan and President de Gaulle, but now he writes as an old friend.

Mr Macmillan is one of the many political leaders who have visited Eisenhower in his retirement. When they arrive, he gladly takes time off to take them in a motorised golf cart on a guided tour of his farm.

A model of this farm sits on Ike's desk in the White House ever since he and Mamie decided in 1952 to sell their home. The real thing is almost as equally remote as the leaves to the practical handling of it to his manager and staff.

He has a herd of 30 Aberdeen Angus cattle—five of which may be exhibited soon at shows—seven horses and two foals. The horses are for his grandchildren. Ike himself no longer rides.

On sunny days, when there are no visitors to distract him, Ike feels the tug of the golf course. And four afternoons out just as he can no longer drive, he instantly obeyed commands that will bring helicopters, planes, and private cars to his disposal, he can no longer summon golf partners when he feels like it.

During office life he had a list of constant golfing companions who dropped everything to fetch their clubs when he felt like a game. At the end of his term of office he wrote to the wives of these men, apologising for demands his golfing had made on their husbands and thanking them for being so understanding. These same men might well be equally keen to partner him now, but Gettysburg is rather more difficult to reach at a moment's notice.

His favorite partner these days is his 18-year-old grandson, David, but David has a will as strong as Ike's, and if he has planned a game of baseball or tennis he says so quite firmly.

A rather lonely figure, with no one now to criticise his time spent on the course, the former President frequently golfs alone.

Boredom

William Howard Taft, another of the few men turned loose after steering the United States, said sadly that an ex-president was like a giant locomotive pulling a toy wagon. It is finding out what he meant.

To close friends he and Mamie have confided that they are bored. Influential contacts are said to be seeking a role for him that would throw him back into partisan politics.

The man whose address is still listed in Who's Who as 1600, Pennsylvania Avenue, could not even drive a car or dial a telephone when he left the White House for the last time. He has had plenty of space in his schedule to learn both skills.

down directorships said to be worth £80,000 a year.

This he can well afford to do financially. Ike, who announced in 1948 that he was broke, is a rich man. His presidential pension is £8,928 a year. And his first book, "Cruises in Europe," netted around £170,000 after taxes.

This money was in trust untouched by Eisenhower during his reign in the White House and his brokers cautiously admit it has been considerably enhanced by careful investments.

He has made few social appearances since he retired. In Gettysburg he has accepted only one invitation—to a stag party, and it was not a success.

People found it difficult to invite such a famous guest. Stripped of his power, Eisenhower still has to battle with the formality of fame. To men who worked beside him during his presidency, he has begged "Call me Ike," but they can't do it.

His evenings are spent quietly in his study with his wife, reading historical novels and westerns, and sometimes ambling over to watch Mamie's favourite television show.

Time is an impossible occupation for a man who has spent his life borrowing it.

He said in a voice that kept warm and caressing and at other times sharp and critical. "I try to talk in English, but I do not know much, but it is good exercise for me."

Bonn.
AS the intricate coalition conversations between the Christian Democratic Union and the Free Democratic Party moved to a close, a new element enters West German politics.

The surprising exclamation ringing through the corridors of the Bonn Bundestag (Parliament) and echoed at busy political cocktail parties all over Bonn is: Cherchez la femme!

Dr Adenauer whose party emerged from the election as the strongest but without its previous overall majority is clearly not influenced by any woman.

and decisions is Frau Margot Mende, the Free Democratic leader's blonde, hefty but most attractive wife, and mother of his two children.

"What's the latest news from Margot?" is the question.

Or the answer according to serious political observers in Bonn, the composition of the next West German government may well turn.

It was her encouragement, it is said, which helped him to climb the stormy paths to the leadership of his party in record time. There is a story according to which Frau Margot roused her husband each morning with these words: "Erich, it's time to get up, and get on with your career!"

Adenauer because he was too old.

These political in-betweens helped Mende's Free Democrats to a total of 86 seats in the new House.

Over and over Erich Mende insisted that he would not serve under Adenauer, rejecting even a compromise solution by saying: "We are not inclined to agree to a temporary Adenauer government." A day later he once more made his position clear. "Coalition, yes, but not with Adenauer as Chancellor."

He followed this up by emphasising that his party would agree to any Christian Democratic Chancellor—except Adenauer.

But no sooner had Dr Adenauer decided to call Mende's bluff—rather than bow to the dictate of the comparative newcomer to West German politics the Chancellor invited谈话 with the Free Democrats when the Bonn dirigibles began to buzz with the highly-important information that, come what may, Margot was "determined to see her husband in the Cabinet."

That this was not idle speculation emerged at a meeting of the Christian Democratic parliamentary party when one of Dr Adenauer's party colleagues, Herr J. P. Josten, exclaimed: "It is high time to talk seriously with Frau Mende!" Applause and roars of laughter.

She changed

Indeed, Dr Mende was soon to weaken visibly in his opposition to Dr Adenauer. Frau Margot was reported to have changed her daily early morning exhortations to her husband.

"It's time to get up and give in to Erich!" she was quoted as saying.

Promptly Dr Mende said in public: "The Free Democratic party may have to examine the possibility of agreeing to Dr Adenauer serving for a transition period."

It would all be highly amusing if it did not throw an ominous light on West German politics. Mende's party includes the most heterogeneous elements who pull their leader in opposite directions—no wonder his politics are a confusing mixture of pro-Western, national-German and neutralist ideas.

While he was saying what agreed policies will emerge from the current consultations between Dr Adenauer and Dr Mende, and which Ministry, if any, Mende himself will occupy under Dr Adenauer, Chancellor problem, no one in West Germany doubts that this phase which has come to be known as "Chancellor Democracy" has come to an end.

Holding his Peleodoscope in his hands he waved goodbye. He looked for a moment like a puzzled and aged child—a Peter Pan lost at a stormy peace conference.

(London Express Service)

He made an elaborate bow, pretending to doff one.

"Picasso is always saying to me: 'It is a long time that I am young. He is 80 now and he grows younger. Every day he writes and often into the night. Now I am making a book with him. I write the words and he illustrates.'

"I have another book coming out. I write it when I am ill recently. One day, pourf, like that, I lose my blood. What you call hemorrhage, yes?

"For two months I lie on my back, but I write with the paper above me. I write everything just as it comes into my head. I call it my résumé.

"It is about everything but not about politics. I hate politics.

"France is sick. All the world is sick. The politicians are sick. More and more bombs. All they want is bang, bang. Everything precious blows up. All the world disappears.

"I cannot help by talking politics. As an artist I must withdraw and speak in my own voice out of my own loneliness to the other people who are ready to listen.

"I am sending one," he said. "To General de Gaulle and Kruschev and your Macmillan. Then they can see new angles on the beautiful world they might destroy.

"I don't want to be killed by the politicians. Life is long in days but short in time, n'est-ce pas?"

"He is still a boy. It is not the function of the artist. If he has anything to say, he should say it in his plays."

Politics

"Your John Osborne is a good playwright. I am told. But he should not waste his time writing letters to the papers."

"He is still a boy. It is not the function of the artist. If he has anything to say, he should say it in his plays."

Youth

"I have another English hat. The first one they give me when they make me Doctor of Literature at Oxford University about five years ago."

"He is still a boy. It is not the function of the artist. If he has anything to say, he should say it in his plays."

Through the bougainvillea on the terrace with the azure Mediterranean beyond, was a maze of everchanging patterns and shades. Cocteau himself was multiplied to a contipede. While he was saying what agreed policies will emerge from the current consultations between Dr Adenauer and Dr Mende, and which Ministry, if any, Mende himself will occupy under Dr Adenauer, Chancellor problem, no one in West Germany doubts that this phase which has come to be known as "Chancellor Democracy" has come to an end.

BARBARA GRIGGS REPORTING:

fashion Queen on a clothes spree

THE SHAH OF PERSIA may have given away the largest private fortune ever—but there are no signs yet that Queen Farah is taking to off-the-peg clothes as an economy measure.

For her recent visit to Paris she arrived with a whole wardrobe of clothes from the current Dior collection (unlike poor Jackie Kennedy who was obliged to be patriotically American-dressed for HER State Visit to Paris).

By request

By Farah's personal request, ten of the leading Paris couturiers put on a Command Performance fashion show for her. And during her private stay in Paris, when Sir Winston was over, she slipped off to Dior and placed another big order.

Her Dior wardrobe was a splendid one; she arrived in their swingy pink trapeze-line coat, collared in black mink with a toque to match.

For the special dress show she wore a white wool suit, with a swingy skirt and a black mink collar (same toque again), and ripped off the jacket halfway through the show to reveal a daintily long-sleeved top in black silk.

Copied

For a morning reception at the Elysee she wore one of the most widely copied numbers in the Collection—a bright three-piece of swirling skirted shirt (she wore it nice and short), fitted jacket and shortsleeved top buttoned over to one side with an octolet toque.

Visiting the Citroen works, she wore a dress and jacket in grey crepe, collared in mink. And her evening appearances were made splendid by two of the most ravishing dresses imaginable (Mare Bohan's particular treat): a pink organza dress with a bodice encrusted with embroidery, and another all-over embroidery which didn't appear in the Collection but bore the imprint of Dior all over it.

Her evening coat? The most splendid in Paris; a floor-length cape of white mink.

Those sweater-and-skirt days on the Left Bank must have seemed a very, very long time ago to her.

NEW WAYS WITH COFFEE

Ice coffee for cocktail time

WHEN the sun is going down, about an hour or so before dinner—that's the perfect time to take a cold drink and some light hors d'oeuvres to the patio. It's the best way there is to end a long, warm day and begin a long, cool evening. Indeed, the cool reality should equal the warm anticipation.

One of the most refreshing pre-dinner drinks is iced coffee espresso—a bracing, zesty and refreshing pick-up that needs only a long twist of lemon peel for colour.

When it's served over cracked ice in a footed glass, it's as romantic and sophisticated as its winter-time counterpart. Moreover, iced espresso will be particularly welcomed by those who don't take cocktails, but enjoy the pre-dinner festivities.

The hors d'oeuvres that go with iced espresso should be light and cool and just as interesting as the beverage. A new, unusual appetizer is Creamy Cheddar Mould, a delicious smoothie to spread on crispy crackers. The mould is made with cottage cheese and cheddar cheese and an assortment of seasonings.

Equally attractive are Fruit Kebabs, lovely appetizers that are fun to eat and just as much

CREAMY CHEDDAR MOULD

2 envelopes unflavoured gelatin
1/4 cup cold water
2 teaspoons instant minced onion
2 cups milk
2 cups fine-curd creamed cottage cheese
2 cups grated sharp cheddar cheese
1/4 teaspoon Tabasco
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

Soften gelatin in cold water. Add onion to milk; heat to scalding. Add to gelatin and stir until gelatin dissolves. Chill until thickened. Combine remaining ingredients and fold into thickened gelatin mixture. Spoon into five-cup mould. Chill until firm.

South can count eight sure tricks and has a lot of places to look for others. He has two ways to finesse for the queen of diamonds and one way for the king of hearts.

He can gain three extra tricks in the heart suit, but if the heart finesse loses, East will lead a spade and West will take a lot of spade tricks.

South must keep East out of the lead so the heart finesse has too much to lose. So has a dink.

NEALE FRASER GETTING BACK INTO FORM

Melbourne, Nov. 1. Former Wimbledon champion Neale Fraser today put himself back in contention for a berth on the Australian Davis Cup team with an impressive performance in his most severe test since undergoing a leg operation.

Fraser, though obviously not yet in top form, ran, turned and jumped for shots with perfect freedom in a strenuous exhibition doubles match.

Before the exhibition, Fraser went through a strong singles workout with professional skill. Frank Sedgeman, then did exercise in a gymnasium.

"I intend to play as much tennis as possible to get into top form for the Davis Cup," the 1960 Wimbledon champion said. Fraser is scheduled to team with Davis Cupper Roy Emerson in doubles in the Queensland Championships next week. However, he won't attempt to play singles before the New South Wales Championships the following week.—UPI.

European Cup win for Spurs

Rotterdam, Nov. 1. Tottenham Hotspur, the English club, beat Feyenoord, of Rotterdam, 3-1 in the first leg of their first round proper European Cup football match here tonight.

Tottenham led 1-0 at half-time.

Tottenham owed their success to their superior experience and fitness against the part-time Dutch professionals who, though tiring towards the end, never gave up trying.

Early on, Feyenoord made several strong attacks but poor shooting and a sound display by Brown in goal prevented them from scoring.

Half-left Terry Dyson put Tottenham ahead after 42 minutes and centre-forward Frank Saul scored for the London side in the 48th and 72nd minutes.

Feyenoord's goal came from right-half Helmut Kreyermans who netted in the 61st minute with a strong shot from 30 yards out.—Reuter.

FAIRS CUP

Belgrade, Nov. 1. The Yugoslav football side Red Star beat Scotland's Hibernian 4-1 in a match in the International Fairs Cup here tonight. The home side led 3-0 at half-time.—UPI.

Except for a spell in the second half when the Irish League tried a comeback after trailing 3-1, this match was a feeble test for the British League before a crowd of about 12,000.

In a little more than half an hour the Football League were five in front with goals by Crawford (2), Harris, Kay and Farnham. Morrison scored the Irish goal.

Miller scored the English League's sixth goal.—Reuter.

Easy Inter-League Soccer win for English XI

Belfast, Nov. 1. The English Football League beat the Irish League 6-1 after leading 5-1 at half-time in their Inter-League match here tonight.

Except for a spell in the second half when the Irish League tried a comeback after trailing 3-1, this match was a feeble test for the British League before a crowd of about 12,000.

The Scottish League had only themselves to blame for not inflicting a decisive defeat on the Italian League under the Hampden lights.

With a first-half storm of wind and rain behind their backs, the Scots threw away numerous chances and fell a goal behind when Gerry Hills, the former England centre-forward now playing for Internazionale of Milan, scored from a rare opportunity in the 32nd minute.

The Scots also did the bulk of the attacking in the second half, but again finished poorly and did not get the equaliser until nine minutes from the end when Ray Brand netted.—Reuter.

Drawn match

Glasgow, Nov. 1. The Scottish League drew 1-1 with the Italian League in the first Inter-League football match.

The Scots also did the bulk of the attacking in the second half, but again finished poorly and did not get the equaliser until nine minutes from the end when Ray Brand netted.—Reuter.

SHOULD FOOTBALLERS KISS EACH OTHER?

Yes, say the girls: No, say the men

Stockholm. Should big, strong, manly footballers kiss each other publicly in front of the crowded stands during a match is a problem now being discussed in Swedish newspapers.

Week after week during the soccer season Sweden's Monday newspapers have been filled with pictures of goal scorers in weekend matches being kissed and embraced by their fellow players.

Sports writers maintain that the habit of expressing their joy and emotions in this way was quite foreign to Swedish footballers and other sportsmen—correct behaviour and dignity are regarded as Swedes' national virtues.

BECOMING A 'MUST'

It is only comparatively recently that these enthusiastic kissing scenes have become common on Swedish football grounds. But in recent weeks, particularly at the more exciting league matches, congratulatory kisses appear to have become "must" for the star goal scorers.

In Sweden football is played in the summer months and the season ends in the autumn to give place, with the advent of snow and icy weather, to winter sports.

Although you will not find Swedish policemen arresting loving couples for kissing in the streets, such behaviour is still formally regarded as "disorderly conduct". Is it not much more shocking to see two big strong men kissing and hugging each other in front of a crowd of 10,000 football fans, one Stockholm newspaper asked.

Donald later flew to Melbourne for a conference of heads of companies associated with the Lake Eyre project.

He praised the enthusiasm of South Australian people for the proposed speed attempt and said this was a big point in its favour.—China Mail Special.

Adelaide, Nov. 1. British speed ace Donald Campbell said in Adelaide today that Lake Eyre looked a very hopeful proposition for a world record land speed attempt.

"We are at present working on what it will cost to remove the salt islands from the strip but the cost is the least of our worries," he said.

Donald later flew to Melbourne for a conference of heads of companies associated with the Lake Eyre project.

He praised the enthusiasm of South Australian people for the proposed speed attempt and said this was a big point in its favour.—China Mail Special.

It has been pointed out that in some sports, cycling and speedway, for example, it is the local girl to kiss the winner when presenting the traditional laurel garland. This too is mere

Soccer news from other lands

By ARCHIE QUICK

Crisis or no crisis, Soccer continues to be played in the Congo, and at Leopoldville there was an exciting "local Derby" between the Nomads and the Dragons.

Photographers were not allowed at or near the goalposts because witchcraft was suspected and feared! They had to take their shots from the midfield touchline. Three Congolese players are now playing in Belgium for Saint Trond FC, states FA News.

The fight against relegation in the Egyptian Championship was so close among five teams up to the final day that bribery was rife and six prominent Internationals were suspended sine die. This has involved the reconstruction of the national eleven. One of the team in the bribery scandal admitted their guilt but failed to save themselves from relegation.

When England play Austria at Wembley on April 4 they will probably face Ernst Gwirck, captain of Austria in 1958 and also skipper of the FIFA team that year. The last of the Continental attacking centres-left, he has just returned to Austria-Vienna FC after playing in Italy for Sampdoria for five years.

Santos FC, of Brazil, the club for whom the legendary Pele plays, will take part in 135 matches during the year 1961.

Alfredo di Stefano has signed a new two years contract with Real-Madrid FC, and the sum he received is stated to be £20,000. Real-Madrid wish to sign the great Pele from Brazil and are prepared to top any other offer made, and play two matches in Sao Paulo in April. The fee they received when they met Santao de Chile was 37,000 American dollars.

ON THE BALL with Stan Cullis

Yes, Matthews is right to play on

IT'S NOT TIME YET TO CALL IT A DAY

Should Stanley Matthews have retired while he was still in the top-flight of League football? Or is he right to accept the new challenge of Second Division soccer at the age of 46, long after most players have left the game?

I suppose no player has had to answer so many questions about his possible retirement as the legendary figure who now reappears in the red and white shirt of Stoke City, the club where he started his wonderful career over three decades ago.

To all these questions about his future, Stan's answer has invariably been that he was enjoying his football too much to contemplate retirement. And that, I would say, is the most practical answer he could give.

Key to success

When a player ceases to enjoy his football and it is reasonable to assume that his age is largely responsible, then he should hang up his boots and call it a day. The fact that he is not enjoying his game will inevitably result in the field being below the expected standard.

In this respect, there are probably quite a few players—a great deal younger than Matthews—who should think about retiring on this score.

But Stan's enjoyment of the game has never waned. Enthusiasm, he has said, is the key to get out of the most awkward situations imaginable.

I recall seeing him in an international against Holland when he was seemingly trapped with the ball right against the corner flag. After side-stepping one defender, he went on to beat another man who was backing up only two or three yards away. It was a fantastic display.

Never let up

Another great asset which he has had—abundance—one usually applied more to boxers—is the "killer instinct."

As soon as he has the measure of a full-back, he would mercilessly take advantage of his superiority and never ease up against the defender.

He did so on many occasions when full-back, had told him to "get rid of the ball" with the implication of grim consequences if he did not.

But this intimidation technique had no effect at all on Matthews. He knew he had the beaten and would ruthlessly exploit the smallest weakness in the defence.

to success. "When I lose my enthusiasm, that will be the day to pack up."

Many times in the past few years, the master-winner has been written off by critics. Always he has continued to produce brilliant games—not, perhaps, as often as he would like, but with such regularity that people suggesting his retirement must frequently have had second thoughts.

Improved with age

I have seen Matthews in action many times, pre-war and post-war, and I believe that he was an even better footballer after the war than when he was younger.

Men who played alongside him in the pre-war period say that when they passed the ball to him, they would rarely receive it back until Stan had beaten two or three opponents and centred the ball for someone to finish off his approach work.

The post-war Matthews, while still a brilliant individualist, appeared to bring his colleagues more into the tactical scheming in midfield. He then impressed me as being more of a team player.

I have never seen a wing forward with such natural brilliance as Matthews. The only footballer I could begin to compare with him is Tom Finney.

Greatest gift

The secret of his supreme craftsmanship.

Varied reasons have been given for his great ability, but above all I would list his wonderful sense of balance. This is a gift born in great players of many sports and a fundamental requirement for a great footballer.

At whatever angle his body might be poised during a game, Matthews would never be caught off balance.

It meant he was able to "wrong foot" so many opponents, his body control also enabled

Champion Charnley plans new career—as a hairdresser

The pearl-grey 2.4 Jaguar with the eye-catching, red leather upholstery slid to a stop outside the pleasant, semi-detached house in Thanet-road, Bexley, Kent. Out of it, clad in an impeccably cut, Italian-style suit, stepped the one-man company of David Fraser Charnley, Ltd., otherwise known as Dave Charnley, the cold, competent, and completely merciless champion who, at Nottingham last month, successfully defended his three light-weight titles—British, European and Empire—against Darkie Hughes, of Wales.

And what, I inquired politely of Britain's top prize-fighter—with all respect to world champions Terry Downes and Johnny Caldwell—had he been doing on that tranquil autumn afternoon?

We were talking in the Charnley lounge where, standing in silver splendour on a sideboard, was a glittering array of trophies.

"I have been at a ladies' hairdressers," answered the iron-fisted southpaw they call Britain's "Midget Mariano."

For a moment I stared at this hard-headed Anglo-Sax—his parents come from Craignauk, near Motherwell, but he was born at Dartford—in shocked disbelief.

"But Dave is exceptionally determined in everything. He has had setbacks, illness, tennis elbow, and an operation on his hand. But once he has made up his mind, nothing stops him."

"He has always known what he has wanted—even when I first met him when he was an amateur and we had nothing."

private course in India's hairdressing."

Said the pretty, blonde wife, Ruth: "When Dave first decided to do this I thought it was a big laugh. All his friends pulled his leg."

So patient

"But Dave is exceptionally determined in everything. He has had setbacks, illness, tennis elbow, and an operation on his hand. But once he has made up his mind, nothing stops him."

"He has always known what he has wanted—even when I first met him when he was an amateur and we had nothing."

Or starting a garage or car business?"

"I've always been interested in hairdressing," he replied. "I've thought about it for years. I want something to occupy my mind when my fighting days are over. Besides, there's plenty of money in it. It's a booming business."

His wife told me: "We did think about opening a garage but, with what the new hire purchase restrictions on cars and falling sales we dropped the idea. As for running a pub, Dave did have one for a while with his brother but gave it up when he was in the Army."

As if reading my thoughts, Charnley said with another of his rare smiles: "I've found that there is a certain similarity between boxing and hairdressing. There can be grace in boxing just as there is grace in cutting women's hair."

"But why HAIRDRESSING?" I said. "Why not a sports shop? Or running a pub?"

"What I really want to do," said this champion whose ambitions are as broad as his shoulders, "is to start a business which I'm still at the top. I'm already looking for premises where I can open a couple of shops."

"It's no use waiting until you've had your last fight and then living on your earnings. The money will soon melt away. Security for the future—that's what I am aiming for."

"You know, there are plenty of people who think, when they read that a boxer is getting £3,000 for a fight, 'Why that's more than I get in a year.'

"But they forget the income tax which, as time goes on and we have other fights, swallows up half of it. Add to that training expenses, your manager's 25 per cent and there's not all that left."

Not rated

"For instance, it costs me £10 a day just to hire one training partner. I need at least two, so that's £20 a week for that one item. Of course, I shall temporarily knock off the afternoon hairdressing sessions two weeks before the fight. It must not interfere with my training."

Charnley's frown deepened as he pondered on the hardships of being a champion in the pain-and-punishment business of assault and battery, boxing.

What is it really like being the wife of a champion?

Says Ruth Charnley: "I've never known Dave to be afraid of anyone, although I believe he was a bit of a terror when he was a little kid staying with his gran in Scotland."

"Then he used to stand at the front door and challenge the other kids to fight. When they said 'No' he went after Mr Robinson once fought for an hour and forty minutes for a "purse" of a golden sovereign and a suit of clothes. He once fought for his crown, and said that fair work was the best employment for fighters. That was why the only modern boxer he admired was Sussex farmer Don Cockell."

He CHANGED HIS MIND—Five minutes after an unaffiliated football match had started in Castle Greenwich the other Sunday the referee blew his whistle and walked off. His excuse was that he was due to participate in an affiliated Festival League game on an adjoining pitch.

SECOND opinion—When Peter Harrison received marching orders from the referee he breached the first Southgate player to be sent off on his home ground at Hail Avenue after the '68s beat the founder members of the Third Division

A fighter's hands... but so gentle as Dave brushes a model's hair

by ALAN HOBY

All he got then was £5 a week as an apprentice boilermaker.

"He has seen, too, the downfall of other boxers and he has no intention of going the same way."

"Do you let him do your hair?" I said.

"Oh, yes. It gives him confidence. He's already very good. He has lots of patience. He cuts it, sets it, combs it."

I looked at the hands which only last month savaged Amerlene's world-ranking Len Matthews in 10 ruthless rounds; which, on a night of ring massacre in Rome last July, smashed Sicilian Ray Noble to a crippling defeat in four rounds; the hands which now deal in perms as well as punches.

As if reading my thoughts, Charnley said with another of his rare smiles: "I've found that there is a certain similarity between boxing and hairdressing. There can be grace in boxing just as there is grace in cutting women's hair."

"But why HAIRDRESSING?" I said. "Why not a sports shop? Or running a pub?"

The woman behind David Charnley Ltd. shook her head. "Good gracious, no," she commented. "If he had earned that we wouldn't be in this business."

Security gimp

"What I really want to do," said this champion whose ambitions are as broad as his shoulders, "is to start a business which I'm still at the top. I'm already looking for premises where I can open a couple of shops."

I left the Charnley convinced that here was a successful, hard-working, give-and-take partnership which will not fall when the fame has faded and the fickle plaudits of the public have died to nothing.

Title dream

I left also remembering the last words of Ruth Charnley: "We have come up together. We have a nice home, car, good clothes. All the comforts."

"But one thing Dave still wants to win above everything else and that is the championship of the world. That's why he can never let up or take any fight lightly."

"Otherwise it's curtains to all our dreams."

U-TURNING TAXI HIT POLICE VAN

A taxi driver whose car collided with a police van was fined $100 by Mr T. L. Yang at Causeway Bay Court this morning for driving carelessly.

Tom Tam, 31, who is of 488 Lockhart-road, ground floor, was also ordered to pay $18 compensation to the police.

Imp. J. A. O'Hare said the police van was travelling along Gloucester-road on August 11 when the taxi made a U-turn and rammed the police vehicle on the outside front door.

The taxi suffered heavy damage as a result, the court was told.

Mr Yang also ordered Tam's driving licence to be endorsed.

Soldier fined for swearing

Craftsman Peter McIntyre, 20, of REME, stationed at 17 (HK) Infantry Workshop in Sik Kung, NT, was fined $25 by Mr P. F. X. Leonard at South Cowick Magistrate this morning for "using indecent words likely to cause a breach of the peace."

Imp. D. J. Collins said McIntyre beckoned to a rickshaw puller outside the Astor Hotel early this morning and then swore at the man when he approached.

McIntyre also swore at a police officer who intervened.

McIntyre said he had had a few drinks and did not know what happened.

Hawker Control constables donate blood

A party of 23 Hawker Control constables from the Training School Brick Hill, Aberdeen, led by Mr C. L. Scobell, Commandant, donated blood to the British Red Cross Society, Fung House this morning.

Seven more constables from the training school will donate blood this afternoon. They will be led by Imp. C. Y. Sia, Principal of the Training School.

'I did not intend to kill,' man says in court

A metal factory worker charged with murder denied at the Criminal Sessions this morning that he bought a knife with the intention of killing a fellow worker.

He is Kong Kuan, 27, charged with the murder of Yim Kai at the Yim Wah metal factory at Nau Tau Kok on June 29.

Kong said yesterday that Yim had talked about him and said he was trying to steal Yim's girl friend, the daughter of the factory proprietor.

On the afternoon of June 29, Kong said, he felt Yim had gone too far with his gossip and he told Yim he should concentrate more on his job.

Grabbed something

Yim grabbed him and put his hands round his throat.

"I thought I was going to be suffocated, so I grabbed something and thrust it at him once. I felt my life was in danger," he said.

To Mr Denis Remedios, Crown Counsel, Kong said he did not intend to kill Yim. He only wanted to make him release his grip on his neck.

Mr Justice R. H. Mills-Owens and the jury of five men and two women are hearing addresses by the Crown and Mr H. L. Hu (for Kong).

The hearing will continue this afternoon.

32 REGIMENT, RA LEAVES AFTER DUTY TOUR HERE

The 32 Regiment, Royal Artillery, under the command of Lt-Col H. A. Hardy, sailed in the trooper Nevosa at noon today for England on holiday on completion of its three-year tour of duty here.

Lt-Gen Sir Roderick McLeod, Commander British Forces, was among high ranking officers saying farewell to the regiment which has been replaced by 34 Regiment, RA.

To mark the departure of the 74 (Battle Axe Company) Battery, 2/Lt David Robertson, a National Service Officer from Dunfermline, Fifeshire, and the tallest member of the Battery, carried the Battle Axe on to the Nevosa. The Axe was initially escorted by members of 13 (Martinique) Battery — now one of the Batteries in 14 Regiment, RA — who handed over their duties to 74 Battery on reaching the ship this morning.
